Leaders reflect on challenges facing Air Force

By Staff Sgt.
Monique Randolph

Air Force Public Affairs

ORLANDO, Fla. — Air Force major command commanders spoke about the challenges facing their organizations during the Air Force Association's 24th annual Air Warfare Symposium and Technology Exposition here Feb. 21 and Friday.

Driving home the urgent need to recapitalize the Air Force's aging fleet of aircraft and space systems, commanders outlined the effects that operating decades-old equipment has had on the ability of their commands' Airmen to perform their various missions.

"We are part of a team that supports federal agencies to make sure your families are protected," said Gen. Victor Renuart Jr., commander of North American Aerospace Defense Command and U.S.

Northern Command at Peterson Air Force Base, Colo.

"Some countries are developing and moving rapidly toward a fifth-generation capability, whether it's surface-to-air defense or air-to-air capability in their fighters," he continued. "Do we know if they will be enemies or friends? The future is uncertain. But can we afford to lag behind them and wait and see? I think not."

Gen. Carroll Chandler, commander of Pacific Air Forces at Hickam AFB, Hawaii, briefed the audience about organizational changes within PACAF. Among those changes are the creation of the 36th Contingency Response Group at Andersen AFB, Guam, a group of assets organized under a single commander that can rapidly deploy anywhere theater-wide to set up

Award winners, supervisors — I salute your excellence

By Col. Greg Touhill

81st Training Wing command

The 81st Training Wing annual awards banquet was Feb. 21, and I want take this opportunity to once again congratulate the outstanding individuals in our wing. It was a great celebration of excellence and camaraderie!

Our wing awards is one way we recognize those who've so excelled in their support of the Air Force mission. The winners clearly went above and beyond and epitomize our Air Force core values of integrity, service, and excellence in all they do. Kudos to you all!

It's been said excellence isn't a skill but an attitude. One of the Air Force's core values, "excellence in all we do," emphasizes just this. It's a real pleasure to see those who've taken it to heart, the award winners AND their supervisors.

I mention both the award winners and their supervisors because being an award winner not only means having done an extraordinary job, but also having a supervisor who recognizes your efforts. I am firmly convinced that behind every major award winner stands a great supervisor who stands smiling in the background with a special pride for their subordinate. They ought to be congratulated too. So, today I want to salute our award winners along with their supervisors.

Civilian category I — Meleta Hand, 81st Medical Group. Supervisor: Capt. Martha Hainey.

Civilian category II — Patti Holliman, 81st Civil Engineer Squadron. Supervisor: Kristen Vollbrecht.

Civilian supervisory category I — Arnold Olier, 81st CES. Supervisor: Master Sgt. Aubrey Goff.

Civilian supervisory category II — Larry Tabor, 81st TRW. Supervisor: Col. Richard Pierce.

First sergeant — Master Sgt. Christopher Rash, 81st Aerospace Medicine Squadron. Supervisor: Col. Kenneth Levin.

Airman — Senior Airman Adam Smith, 81st CES. Supervisor: Master Sgt. Jacob Peetz.

Company grade officer — Capt. Mishawn Johnson, 81st Comptroller Squadron. Supervisor: Lt. Col. Robert Gurner.

Field grade officer — Maj. Leo Lawson Jr., 333rd Training Squadron. Supervisor: Lt. Col. Kay Spannuth.

Noncommissioned officer — Staff Sgt. Ladarian Outsey, 81st Training Support Squadron. Supervisor: Senior Master Sgt. Richard Skripek.

Senior NCO — Master Sgt. Lonnie Bacon, 81st CES. Supervisor: Maj. Patrick Breaux.

Honor guard program manager — Master Sgt. Andrea Turner, 81st Mission Support Group. Supervisor: James Taylor.

Once again, my heartiest congratulations to each and every one of you. Your efforts have ensured Keesler is coming back better than ever!

Gators glide to drill win

By Susan Griggs

Keesler News staff

The Gators from the 334th Training Squadron were right at home with Friday's damp, swamp-like weather, snapping up a victory in the 81st Training Group's first drill down of 2008.

The Gators tied for first in open ranks, second in regulation drill and third in freestyle drill to earn 20 points and overall honors.

Last year's drill down champs, the 338th TRS Dark Knights, were within striking distance with 19 points after placing first in regulation drill, third in open ranks and fourth in freestyle drill.

The 336th TRS Red Wolves claimed third place and 18 points with a tie for first in open ranks, first in freestyle drill and fourth in regulation drill.

The 335th TRS Bulls, with 11 points, were third in regulation drill, fifth in open ranks and sixth in freestyle drill for fourth place overall.

The 332nd TRS Mad Dogs were in fifth place with 10 points after placing second in freestyle drill, fifth in regulation drill and sixth in open ranks.

The Center for Naval Aviation Technical Training Unit came in last place with seven points after finishing fourth in open ranks, fifth in freestyle drill and sixth in regulation drill.

Great Gators

Air University Public Affairs

MAXWELL Air Force Base, Ala. — The Community College of the Air Force here recently appointed an Air National Guard chief master sergeant as its first enlisted vice commandant since the school's creation more than 35 years ago.

Chief Master Sgt. Joseph Thornell is the first enlisted Airman to serve in the position historically held by an active-duty officer.

The former command chief holds a master's degree in leadership from Bellevue University in Omaha, Neb., and served in the South Dakota kindergarten through 12th grade school system as a chief education officer.

His military background and civilian skills as superintendent of a school district led to his appointment, he said, which is another first for members of the Air National Guard.

TRAINING AND EDUCATION NOTES

Drill downs, parades

The 81st Training Group holds drill downs and parades on the drill pad behind the Levitow Training Support Facility.

The schedule:

Communication, information competition Keesler earns 4 AETC awards

By Susan Griggs

Keesler News staff

Keesler earned four awards in Air Education and Training Command's communication and information competition for 2007.

Winners are:

Senior Airman Dallas Ebanez, 81st Training Support Squadron, communications and electronics airman (3C).

Tech. Sgt. Christopher Kurt, 338th Training Squadron, communications and computer systems (2E) noncommissioned officer.

Jack Dupree, 81st Communications Squadron, civilian technician.

333rd TRS, national level information assurance organization of the year.

Airman Ebanez, a curriculum developer, analyzed five deployable command, control, communications and computer packages and proposed 305 task deletions, saving 2,700 man-hours and $12,000. He centralized five training tracks for information assurance professionals and validated a number of training courses, defining tasks, updating or eliminating obsolete requirements and fixing discrepancies.

He revamped certification for network controllers, setting rigid standards and benchmarking core requirements for 500 troops.

Sergeant Kurt, ground radio instructor supervisor, was NCO in charge of the site maintenance team at a convoy support center while deployed to Iraq. He designed, installed and spun up a radio over internet protocol routed network in central Baghdad in four days which filled 48 command and control gaps. He spearheaded eight RIPRNET installations providing around-the-clock response for 74,000 square miles of Iraqi battlespace.

At Keesler, he was rated "outstanding" during the 81st Training Wing's 2007 operational readiness inspection and the 81st Training Group's standardization and evaluation inspection. Rated No. 1 of 87 NCOs in his unit, he earned the squadron's Lance Sijan Award.

Mr. Dupree, the base communications equipment control officer, prepared Keesler's inventory of 32,000 information technology assets valued at more than $45 million for the 2007 ORI, which merited an "excellent" rating. He received and tracked $6.5 million in network management devices that facilitated upgrades to 22 facilities.

He enabled the donation of 750 personal computers to the Biloxi School System, installed 16 computers in various classrooms and was involved in Parent-Teacher Association fundraising and Boy Scout adult leadership.

The 333rd TRS team was responsible for an IA string suite used to train 576 communications and electronics technicians. The group piloted the 81st TRW virtual classroom program, eliminating 49 personal computers and servers and saving the squadron $73,500 in computer upgrade costs. The team conducted 72 network protection training classes and prepared 166 computer security managers from seven major commands.

The IA unit managed Keesler's largest computer security account with assets valued at $900,000 with 100 percent accountability and no inspection write-ups.

Team members are Master Sgts. Shaun Hataway and Brian Frazier; Tech. Sgts. Joseph Harkleroad, Tony Moon and John Lane; Staff Sgts. David Gersolina and Richard Striggow, and civilians Thomas Rivera, Charles Clonts and Charles Lyons.

IN THE NEWS

Commander's call

An 81st Training Wing commander's call is 10:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Tuesday in Welch Auditorium.

Medical center breakfast bar

Starting Wednesday, Keesler Medical Center's dining room offers a new and improved self-service "Daily Grind" breakfast bar.

The menu includes hot and cold cereal, pancakes, waffles, bagels, fat-free yogurt, fruit, regular and decaffeinated coffee and tea, hot chocolate, cappuccino, milk, juice, soda, toast and muffins.

According to Maj. Stacey Van Orden, 81st Medical Operations Squadron nutritional medicine flight commander, the expanded menu offers more healthy items.

"For example we have removed the cookies and replaced them with bagels," the major pointed out. "We'll also have instant grits, oatmeal and bread. It's still a 'grab and go' operation. The waffles and pancakes are frozen and customers toast them themselves."

The dining room is only available to 81st Medical Group staff, patient visitors and personnel on temporary duty with the medical group. Keesler civilian employees, other than members of the 81st MDG staff, aren't authorized to use the medical center cafeteria. Also, guest privileges for duty personnel are normally limited to Thanksgiving and Christmas lunches.

The coffee bar is open 7:30-9:30 a.m. weekdays. It's closed compressed work schedule Fridays and holidays.

Death notification

Col. Greg. Touhill, 81st Training Wing commander, announces the death of Tech. Sgt. John Templin, 338th Training Squadron.

Any person or persons having claims for or against Sergeant Templin's estate, call Maj. Steven Barker, 377-9514.

An account in Sergeant Templin's memory has been set up at Keesler Federal Credit Union to help his family. Donations can be made at any KFCU branch.

For more information, call Wayne Rowell, 377-5817.

Cell phone restrictions for drivers

It's a primary offense to use a cell phone while driving on base without a hands-free device.

Violators can be stopped and ticketed for this offense by the 81st Security Forces Squadron.

Off-limits establishments

Off-limits establishments for military members are the Blue Note Lounge, Boulevard Nightclub and Henry Beck Park (except during daylight hours or official events) in Biloxi; Carver Village, Bunksmall Apartments and H&H Hideaway in Pascagoula, and Toni's Lounge in Moss Point.

an airfield. Also, plans continue to bed-down the Global Hawk unmanned aerial vehicle at Andersen beginning in 2009.

General Chandler also spoke about the need to modernize the tanker fleet at Hickam, which ranges in age from 44-51 years old.

Aircraft aren't the only Air Force assets in urgent need of recapitalization. U.S. Space Command is also challenged with using aging space systems to provide essential capabilities for the Air Force.

Would-be adversaries know how the U.S. uses space in its warfighting capabilities, and understand how challenging the Air Force on that front can provide a way to contend with American air power, said Gen. C. Robert Kehler, commander of Air Force Space Command at Peterson.

General Kehler cited jamming attempts of American global positioning systems by foreign governments, and the use of an anti-satellite weapon by the Chinese last year as examples of developing threats for which the U.S. must be prepared.

"Space power has helped shape the American approach to warfare; it gives our

The 81st Training Wing Public Affairs Office and Keesler News won 10 Air Education and Training Command awards for 2007.

The office won the AETC Public Affairs Director's Excellence Award for issues management. This award recognizes "an exceptional communication program undertaken to deal with issues that could extraordinarily affect the mission or organization."

The Keesler News won nine media contest awards, more than any other newspaper in the command.

The awards:

Journalist of the year — Perry Jenifer, editor, first place. He won this award for the second straight year, fourth time in five years and fifth time in seven years.

Series — Airman 1st Class David Salanitri, first.

warfighters a precise advantage," General Kehler said. "Without space, military operations would be far less precise, focused, timely, coordinated and efficient, and far more costly."

Gen. Kevin Chilton, commander of U.S. Strategic Command at Offutt AFB, Neb., spoke of the need to reenergize the Air Force's nuclear capabilities. With nearly all the Airmen with experience in nuclear programs retired, and a waning focus on the nuclear mission since the end of the Cold War, nuclear capability is fast deteriorating.

"Today and in the future, we need a credible nuclear deterrent in the U.S.," General Chilton said. "We also need people with the expertise to build, maintain and use them in a deterrent scenario. We need infrastructure to support that weapons system. And the warfighters need the tools to do the assigned missions; the weapons and delivery systems to pose a credible deterrent for our adversaries."

Rounding out the conference were Generals John Corley, Arthur Lichte, Bruce Carlson and William Looney.

General Corley, commander of Air Combat Command, spoke about the importance of maintaining air dominance and learning from previous conflicts and wars.

"Our ability to provide global vigilance, reach and power is predicated on the continued ability to own the skies," he said. "Our ability to achieve air dominance depends on overmatch in both capability and capacity. We must possess and maintain overmatch, and today that's becoming increasingly at risk."

General Lichte echoed those concerns for Air Mobility Command aircraft.

"The size of the fleet and force are decreasing, but airlift requirements continue an upward trend," said the AMC commander.

General Looney, commander of Air Education and Training Command, wrapped up the symposium on the state of Air Force education and training.

Air Force officials are working toward offering scholarships for ROTC cadets interested in entering medical career fields. They're also extending combat skills training for basic trainees beginning in October, and expanding survival evasion resistance escape training to more career fields.

Additionally, in fiscal 2010, Common Battlefield Airman Training becomes available for Airmen in certain career fields that require additional combat skills training

New system for GPC cardholders

March 10, the government purchase card program begins using the Access Online system.

Conversion to the new system won't interrupt cardholder services; but mandatory training is required for all GPC approving officials and cardholders.

The 81st Contracting Squadron GPC program management team conducts training sessions, 8-10 a.m. or 1-3 p.m. today at Welch Auditorium. All cardholders and approving officials must attend one of the sessions, as well as complete the prerequisite online training at <https://wbt.access.usbank.com>.

For more information, call Sheree Fowler, 377-1849.

MPF customer service changes

The military personnel flight customer service office has new system requirements for a variety of services, including issuance of identification and common access cards.

For example, customers must now bring two forms of identification to be scanned before a new ID card can be issued.

For more information or specifics about particular situation, call 377-3018 or 377-3203.

Reduced Manning for reenlistments

The reenlistment office is operating with reduced staff until June 1 because of a deployment.

Appointments only are accepted on work days from 8 a.m. to noon. Walk-in customers are accepted in the afternoons.

Support tool available online

Air Force Personnel Center

RANDOLPH Air Force Base, Texas— The Airmen Development Plan is a Web-based decision support tool designed to integrate numerous force development tools, including electronic records, duty histories and assignment preferences, into one platform.

Phase 1 applied to active-duty officers and replaces the transitional Officer Development Plan. This month, Phase 2 replaces the transitional Civilian Development Plan and also incorporates the developmental education nomination process.

Officers can access ADP via the AFPC secure Web site and the Air Force Portal.

As part of the ADP implementation plan, officers are no longer able to access T-ODPs in AMS. Data from T-ODPs posted at AFPC has been transferred onto the ADP platform. Information in T-ODPs not received by AFPC, such as draft T-ODPs, doesn't transfer. Officers are encouraged to retain a hard copy of their current T-ODP in the event any data is lost during the transition.

The Air Force established a Web page on the Air Force Portal where enlisted personnel can create their development plans. The page can be accessed by typing "MyEDP" in the search function.

Emergency data cards

Airmen are required to designate one immediate family member as the person authorized to direct the disposition of their remains should they become a casualty.

The designation becomes part of the member's emergency data record. Most Airmen add the information to their virtual EDR through the virtual military personnel flight.

Deployed personnel contact their personnel support for contingency operations team to update their records.

For more information, call the Air Force Contact Center, 1-800-616-3775.

Airmen serving long tours rewarded for commitment

Air Force Personnel Center

RANDOLPH Air Force Base, Texas — Some deployed Airmen who've served uncharacteristically long tours of duty become qualified for a special advance assignment/deferral program, according to Air Force Personnel Center officials here.

"This program recognizes that some of our Airmen, enlisted and officer, who have served a tour of duty of at least 300 consecutive days in a 365-day period in a location authorized hazardous duty pay, should be rewarded for their commitment," said Col. Stanley Perrin, director of assignments at AFPC.

The AAD program is designed to allow all qualified Airmen to request an advance assignment or an in-place 24 month assignment deferral. In addition to serving 300 consecutive days in a 365-day period, Airmen also must have a minimum of 36 months time on station as of their permanent change-of-station date, according to officials.

Joint spouse consideration is applicable and Airmen must have sufficient retainability to serve the associated PCS. There are several other qualifying requirements.

Interested Airmen should contact their local military personnel flights. Applications should be made to an individual's unit commander by form letter. Drafts are available at MPFs.

"Desires of the Airman will be heavily considered; however, unit manning and the needs of the Air Force must be a deciding factor," said Colonel Perrin.

Helpful, hazardous Power strips, extension cords can be double-edged swords

Keesler Public Affairs

The need to have many power-hungry electronic items on one's desk or just around the work center has seen an explosion in the use of power strips and extension cords.

These items, while helpful to extend the reach of your power outlets, can also damage electronics or cause accidents or fires.

Electrical extension cords are designed to provide temporary power to tools or equipment when conventional outlets aren't nearby. They're not be used as substitutes for permanent wiring.

Before using extension cords:

Inspect them for damage prior to each use.

If any part of an extension cord is damaged (e.g., plug detached from the sheath, insulation cracked or worn, plug damaged), repair or replace the cord. Don't attempt to repair damage with electrical tape.

Don't overload extension cords by plugging in equipment that draws more wattage than the rating of the cord.

When using extension cords outdoors or in a damp environment, ensure protection is provided by a ground fault interrupter (either built into the cord, the outlet or the circuit).

Don't use multiple extension cords in series. Use one cord of the proper cord length.

Never use nails or staples to attach or hang extension cords.

If cords must pass through a walkway, road, sidewalk or other area which could cause a trip hazard or damage to the cord, protect them by molded housings or bridges.

If there's sparking, smoke or odor coming from an outlet, plug, tool or equipment, unplug the cord and call the fire department immediately.

Before using power strip surge protectors:

Don't use strips in wet locations.

Don't use multiple strips in series or in combination with extension cords.

Use only strips that are Underwriters Laboratories approved.

Ensure plugs placed into the strip receptacles are firmly and fully seated to avoid exposure of the metal prongs.

Use only strips equipped with internal fuses or circuit breakers.

Don't use damaged strips. Strips equipped with indicator lights are recommended because they provide the only visual indication that a strip has reached its voltage absorbing capacity and is no longer functioning to protect the equipment plugged into it.

Use only three-prong grounded outlets.

Some power strips may have other limitations of use depending on the specific type. Be sure to read and follow the manufacturer's instructions.

New clinic targeting active duty

81st Medical Group

Keesler Medical Center opens a new clinic March 17 to address the special needs of active-duty members in regard to mobility, foreign travel and duty and fitness requirements.

All active-duty members currently enrolled in the family practice clinic are being enrolled in the new clinic. Some non-active-duty enrollees assigned to the providers in the active-duty clinic are being reenrolled to other primary care managers within family practice.

“The new clinic allows us to better support the active-duty needs for readiness, duty requirements, and physical fitness,” explained Maj. Curtis Hudson, internal medicine clinic and medicine subspecialty group practice manager. “This process provides an ideal means of expeditiously caring for our active-duty members. Assigning them under one PCM team gives the members a centralized PCM team and provides the chain of command a single focal point for medical concerns.

“Centralization improves continuity of care within the PCM team and enhances our ability to provide the necessary support,” the major said.

The hours are the same as those of the family practice clinic: 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday-Thursday and 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday.

Affected beneficiaries receive a letter providing their new PCM’s name.

For more information, call Maj. Pamala Brown-Grayson, 376-3335.

Air Force Aid Society unveils new loans for emergencies

By Staff Sgt. Tanya Holditch

Keesler Public Affairs

The Air Force Aid Society's new Falcon Loan program is available to Airmen Monday.

The interest-free loans of up to $500 are intended to assist Airmen with emergencies such as basic living expenses (rent, utilities or food), car repairs, emergency travel or other approved needs. The loans are available twice in an Airman's career.

Active-duty Airmen, Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard personnel activated on Title 10 orders at the time of application are eligible. They first download the loan application from the AFAS Web site, <http://www.afas.org>. Then they bring the completed application to the airman and family readiness center with a current leave and earnings statement and their identification card.

The process is simple and easy and Airmen can receive the loan the same day they apply for it, according to Master Sgt. Ernesto Alvendia, superintendent of the airman and family readiness center.

"The loans are pretty much on the honor system," said Sergeant Alvendia. "If they fit the criteria, they won't be turned down."

"This is Air Force Aid Society's attempt to meet the needs of the truly needy folks," he said. "Sometimes when Airmen encounter emergencies, they take out high-interest loans or add to their existing credit card debt. I think it's dangerous when they do because they are desperate, and they get caught up in a snowball effect."

Airmen are expected to repay the loans by allotment within 10 months or by their estimated time in service, if less than 10 months.

For more information, call the airman and family readiness center, 377-2179.

Keesler honors top military, civilian performers of 2007

By Susan Griggs

Keesler News staff

The 81st Training Wing honored its top performers for 2007 at the annual awards banquet Feb. 21.

Four of the 11 winners are from the 81st Civil Engineer Squadron. Winners are:

Airman — Senior Airman Adam Smith, 81st CES structural specialist. Airman Smith was instrumental in the $895,000 renovation of 2nd Air Force's operations center. He upgraded a 20,000-square-foot storage vault, replaced rotted floor at the recycling center and directed flatbed trailer restoration which saved $25,000 in replacement costs. He designed and constructed 16 ramps for dormitory balconies, renovated 4,000 square feet of ceiling in Muse Manor, spearheaded installation of four basketball goals and bleachers at one of the fitness centers and erected tents for a housing groundbreaking ceremony and deployment exercise.

Airman Smith, a physical training leader for his squadron, won the commandant's leadership award at Airman Leadership School graduation and supported the American Heart Association's Heart Walk, Hiller Park cleanup, Child Pride Day, Lopez Elementary School playground construction, Special Olympics and Keesler's celebration of the Air Force's 60th birthday.

Noncommissioned officer — Staff Sgt. Ladarian Outsey, 81st Training Support Squadron network infrastructure curriculum developer. Sergeant Outsey was deployed for 240 days to Afghanistan to provide command, control, communications and computer support for coalition forces for which he earned the Army Commendation Medal. He covered for 30 NATO convoys as leader of a reconnaissance team that searched for enemy forces and explosive devices.

Sergeant Outsey supervised two communications-electronics job qualification standard reviews and spearheaded solution efforts. He analyzed 12 field feedbacks on quality training packages and coordinated a course materials request for C4 training. He coordinated delivery of $10,000 worth of school supplies donated by Keesler to an Afghan school, served as a school test proctor, assembled and distributed 450 Angel Tree packages, served as a youth center basketball coach and led games and activities during child development center's fall festival.

Senior NCO — Master Sgt. Lonnie Bacon, 81st CES heavy repair superintendent. Sergeant Bacon supervises six trades and 60 personnel while managing a $1.5 million budget. He led completion of 897 work requests valued at $2 billion. He managed paintball course construction, $155,000 chapel renovation, $300,000 dormitory renovation, $276,000 lodging refurbishing effort and a $196,000 project that built eight pavilions for student dormitories.

Sergeant Bacon managed Airman's Attic, served as 81st TRW Top III treasurer and Child Pride Day leader, and led the 81st Mission Support Group's Air Force Assistance Fund drive.

Company grade officer — Capt. Mishawn Johnson, 81st Comptroller Squadron financial services flight commander. Captain Johnson is Air Education and Training Command's financial services officer of the year and the 81st TRW woman of the year in the officer category. She developed three Air Force "best practices," changed travel voucher process to increase accuracy and oversaw the government travel card program to achieve a .37 percent delinquency rate, surpassing the command's 2 percent goal.

Captain Johnson served as treasurer of the company grade officer council, led a 14-member team that tackled a "Make a Difference Day" project at a Biloxi elementary school and volunteered at Special Olympics. She also chaired the Federal Women's Program's 10-member team that raised $500 for cancer research during four events during Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

Field grade officer — Maj. Leo Lawson, 333rd Training Squadron director of operations. Major Lawson led 115 military and civilian employees in delivering 29,000 hours of advanced training encompassing 54 courses, 340 classes and 6,000 graduates. He drove classroom transformation with $250,000 virtual software and Thin-Client configuration that was recognized as an Air Force best practice. He advised and prepared the Scope Warrior conference and revamped the Scope Eagle course and guided personnel for course development of 26-day basic communications officer training.

At his previous assignment, Major Lawson ran the arts and crafts booth for the Boys and Girls Club Kids Day, participated in the American Heart Association's Heart Walk and volunteered to provide Thanksgiving and Christmas meals for homeless and low-income families.

First sergeant — Master Sgt. Christopher Rash, 81st Dental Squadron and 81st Aerospace Medicine Squadron. Sergeant Rash inspired volunteerism by holding NCO and Airmen calls which generated 793 volunteer hours and played a key role in winning AETC's large dental clinic of the year award.

He developed a tracking tool for 30 family care plans which was adopted for base-wide use. He was credited with saving the life of a badly-intoxicated member and averting a potential suicide.

Sergeant Rash directed logistics for two 81st TRW welcome-home picnics for deployed members and was involved with the Top 3 Thanksgiving dinner for permanent party dormitory residents. He chaired the first sergeants council's ways-and-means committee and co-chaired a first sergeant symposium for 60 senior NCOs. He led the sabre team for the senior NCO induction ceremony and led squadron involvement in Project Cheer and Angel Tree projects.

Honor guard manager — Master Sgt. Andrea Turner, 81st Services Division, won this award for the second consecutive year. She managed Keesler's honor guard program which provided more than 400 funerals in 2007. She supervised operations over the southern half of Mississippi and Alabama, an area encompassing about 48,000 square miles. She was responsible for more than 90 individuals in training and performance of their duties.

Sergeant Turner saved the program thousands of dollars in uniform costs by reusing uniforms from the uniform exchange program. She provided ceremonial guardsmen uniforms during a critical fund shortage, ensuring all members were attired in proper uniforms with minimum costs, saving more than $6,000. She revamped the training program to increase team proficiency and mentored military members to improve unit capabilities and war readiness.

Civilian category 1 — Meleta Hand, 81st Medical Operations Squadron medical laboratory technician. Ms. Hand was Advance Magazine's Laboratorian of the Year. She serves as lead hematology technician and earned perfect scores on accreditation proficiency surveys. She helped reestablish Keesler's laboratory as a regional reference where testing for 22 Defense Department facilities was performed, saving $1.3 million. She trained students in three sections with no failures.

As a member of the flight's morale committee, she helped raise $250 to offset holiday party costs for junior enlisted members. She prepared and delivered 60 "meals on wheels" for homebound people and taught Sunday school for third and fourth grade students.

Civilian category 2 — Patti Holliman, 81st CES budget analyst and resources adviser. Ms. Holliman was a key contributor to the resources flight's Thompson Award for best resources flight in the Air Force. She managed a $43.1 million budget, Keesler's largest squadron budget. She is fiscally responsible for the Air Force's largest construction program and facilitated obligation of 50 projects dealing with five separate contracting offices.

Ms. Holliman is an active member of Sacred Heart Catholic Church, where she volunteers to assist elderly members each week. She's active in a variety of school and community athletic activities. As a member of her squadron booster club, she helped coordinate a Thanksgiving luncheon for 450 people.

Civilian supervisor category 1 — Arnold "Joey" Olier, 81st CES utilities section manager. Mr. Olier manages Keesler's $100 million water system and directed repair of two damaged water wells to increase production capability by more than 25 percent. He achieved a 93 percent on-time completion rate on 860 work orders. He directed hydrostatic testing on fuel pipelines and overhauled 650 backflow devices and led repair of 11 damaged gas main lines and replacement of 200 gas valves.

He is a key organizer of Cruising the Coast and planned a car show for cancer research that raised more than $18,000 for two area youths, as well as six other car shows that raised $40,000 for Toys for Tots and other community outreach programs. He performed 120 hours of free plumbing work for 15 disadvantaged families.

Civilian supervisor category 2 — Larry Tabor, 81st TRW plans and programs analyst. Mr. Tabor personally trained 56 unit plans representatives to ensure currency and compliance with guidance from higher headquarters. He coordinates the crisis action team, crafted Keesler's hurricane database to provide 24/7 personnel accountability and was a key player in the wing's implementation of the Air Force Incident Management System.

Mr. Tabor served as vice president of the St. Martin/D'Iberville Chamber of Commerce and is a Mississippi Special Olympics board member. As chief executive officer of Mississippi Knights of Columbus, he leads more than 6,500 members, distributing $84,000 to multiple charities, raising $100,000 for the seminarian education fund and leading a fundraising drive for individuals with intellectual disabilities.

Sponsors for the banquet included Keesler Federal Credit Union, Biloxi Chamber of Commerce, Biloxi Bay Chamber of Commerce, Beau Rivage Resort, Harris Jewelers, Army and Air Force Exchange Service and Keesler Top 3.

'Wrongful appropriation,' perjury produce conviction

Legal office and Keesler News staff

One court-martial was convened at Keesler in January.

A technical sergeant in the 81st Communications Squadron was found guilty of "wrongful appropriation" and perjury.

The sergeant was found not guilty of attempted pre-meditated murder and larceny.

The military judge sentenced the sergeant to reduction to senior airman and a reprimand.

Brent Richardson, legal office, and Perry Jenifer, Keesler News editor, contributed to this report.

Alcohol leads to 6 Articles 15

3Legal office and Keesler News staff

Six Airmen assigned to Keesler units received Articles 15 in January for alcohol-related offenses.

81st Transportation Squadron — For underage drinking and trying to flee the scene, an airman was reduced to airman basic, received seven extra duty days and forfeited $650 pay. The reduction in rank and forfeiture of pay were suspended for six months on condition of maintaining good behavior.

35th Training Squadron — An airman forfeited $670 pay for two months for consuming alcohol off-base while in Phase I training, being late for formation three times, being out of uniform and making a false official statement. An airman first class forfeited $767 pay and received 30 days correctional custody, which was suspended for six months, for underage drinking at an off-base casino. An airman basic forfeited $619 pay and received 30 extra duty days, which was suspended for six months, for underage drinking and making a false official statement.

336th TRS — An airman was reduced to airman basic and forfeited $619 pay for two months, which was suspended for six months, for being caught with alcohol in a dormitory during an inspection.

336th TRS, Detachment 6 — An airman basic received 41 days of restriction and forfeited $500 pay for two months for driving under the influence on base with an expired license plate while playing loud music.

Brent Richardson, legal office, and Perry Jenifer, Keesler News editor, contributed to this report.

New year opens with 4 DUI incidents

81st Security Forces Squadron and Keesler News staff

The new year at Keesler opened with four cases of driving under the influence in January, according to the 81st Security Forces Squadron.

The DUIs involved a reservist, one Air Force and one Marine Corps technical training student and a civilian.

All four cases occurred at the White Avenue and Pass Road Gates.

The 81st SFS recorded 11 incidents of underage drinking last month.

Nine incidents involved tech training students, seven Airmen and two Marines. A permanent party Airman and a civilian accounted for the other two incidents.

Six of the incidents occurred at the White Avenue and Pass Road Gates, and five at dormitories.

Tech. Sgt. James Kirk, 81st SFS, and Perry Jenifer, Keesler News editor, contributed to this report.

Drinking + driving = deadly duo.

Earned income credit may boost tax refund

By Master Sgt. Scott Wagers

Air Force News Agency

RAMSTEIN Air Base, Germany — Filing his family's taxes each year online, Master Sgt. Ron Przysucha normally receives about $3,000 in tax returns.

This year however, he was taken by surprise when the same Web site he traditionally uses calculated his return at nearly $8,000.

"I immediately thought it was a mistake and I didn't want to owe the government money, so I went to the IRS Web site to verify the information for military members and it told me that there was a change in the (earned income credit) rules," said Sergeant Przysucha, a television broadcaster assigned to Air Force News Detachment 4.

The tax laws affecting military taxpayers have changed significantly over the last few years, said Capt. Mary Ellen Payne, the officer in charge of the tax center at Ramstein Air Base.

"In the past, military pay allowances such as variable housing allowance and cost-of-living allowance were traditionally included as part of your earned income, even though those allowances weren't taxed. This would put most military members over the annual income threshold of qualifying for the earned income credit," Captain Payne said.

"Also, non-taxable combat pay is no longer included in your annual earned income.

At Keesler

The tax office is open 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. on duty days in Room 234, Hangar 2.

For appointments, call 377-4454.

If someone was gone to the desert for a significant period of time then his or her annual income is going to be significantly smaller which may better qualify him or her for earned income credit," she said.

"Your best chances of qualifying are if you're a couple filing jointly with two children have an annual income threshold of around $39,000," Captain Payne said.

There are six different income thresholds based on the structure and employment status of each family, as well as the number of children included in the family.

The earned income credit is a law created to give tax breaks to working families. It's a refundable credit, meaning even if you have no tax liability — in other words, you don't owe taxes for the year and you're scheduled to receive back everything you paid out over the calendar year, you can still qualify to receive earned income credit on top of the money withheld throughout the year. The maximum amount of income credit being paid is $4,716.

Airman 1st Class Michael

Schindler, 723rd Air Mobility Squadron, saw his annual return increase from $2,300 to nearly $5,000.

"I guess I wasn't filing my taxes right but now I am. I hope to use the extra money to buy a better car," he said.

"The last thing that's important to know is that it's difficult for the tax office to estimate how much people will receive on their return without using a certain type of software because there are many variables that affect what you qualify for," Captain Payne said.

"That said, we encourage people to come to us and we'll help them understand exactly how much they qualify for," she said.

Other mandates for earned income credit qualification:

You can't file "married, filing separately" to qualify for earned income credit. Partners must file jointly.

Both partners filing jointly and all claimed children must possess U.S. issued social security numbers.

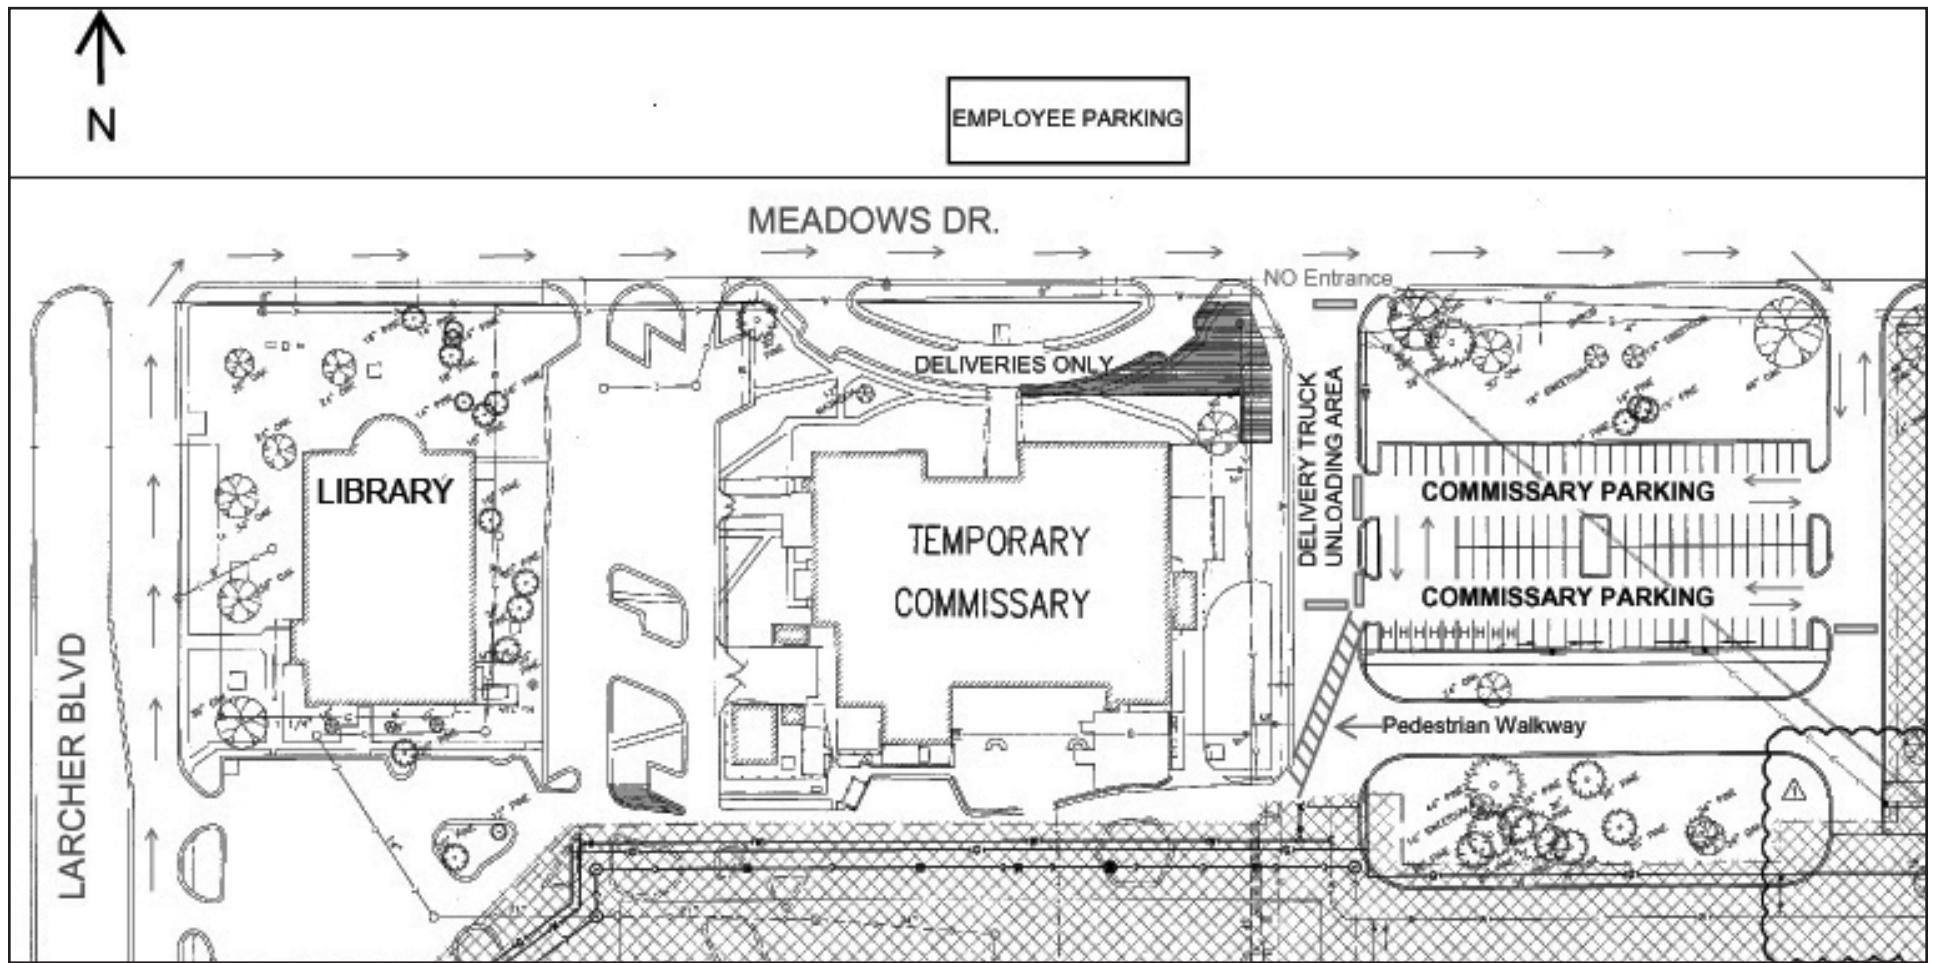

If you have a foreign spouse, they must possess a U.S. issued social security number (not an "ITIN," Individual Tax Identification Number).

You have to have lived in the U.S. for at least six months out of the year.

Dark Knights run streak in Over-30 League to 8-0

By Airman 1st Class
David Salanitri

Keesler News staff

The 338th Training Squadron extended its lead even further this week, going to an 8-0 record in the Over 30 Basketball League.

The Dark Knights have secured a demanding lead, with the 81st Civil Engineer Squadron, 4-3, their nearest competitor with six games left for the playoffs.

"We want to remain undefeated and win everything. We want to win, period. That's our goal," said William Mays, 338th TRS coach.

"Scoring is our biggest weapon. Most teams are looking to score about 40 points; when we go out on the court, we want to score 100," said Mays.

With this being the first pay-to-play league at Keesler, many eyes are on it.

"The league is going great. The players are very appreciative, and so am I. We have some great committed volunteer workers officiating and score keeping at the games," said Laurence Wilson, sports director.

The 81st CES played the 338th TRS Feb. 19 and lost by only seven points, keeping the pressure on the 338th TRS.

For complete scores, standings and schedules see Scores and More, Page 24.

Soccer team falls short in tourney

By Airman 1st Class

David Salanitri

Keesler News staff

Keesler's men's varsity soccer team was eliminated after a 4-2 loss in its fourth game in the 2008 Defender's Cup Alamo City Military Open Soccer Tournament, Feb. 15-17 in San Antonio. In the Dragons' first game, they lost to Offutt Air Force Base, Neb., 5-1, with their lone goal scored on a penalty kick by Carlos Zuniga.

In the second game, the Dragons outscored the Defense Language Institute, Calif., 14-0.

Richard Bonsra scored five goals, Ranson Coleman scored four, and Kaota Saechao, Nathan Evans, Andres Paredes, Nathaniel Caldon and Jorge Panama each scored one. The Dragons won their third game, 2-0, against Fort Sam Houston, Texas. The goals were scored by Zuniga on his second penalty kick of the tournament, and by Fort Sam Houston, scoring on themselves.

The Dragons moved into eighth place of 18 teams as they headed into their fourth game, where they met Randolph AFB, Texas. "Like our first game, we had a hard time clicking and couldn't find our rhythm on the field," coach Eric Hernandez said. "We didn't do anything extremely wrong. A lot of small things added up in the end and really hurt us," Hernandez concluded. "I'm proud of the team, but we all expected to finish higher."

Bonsra and Coleman each scored one goal in the 4-2 loss.

The team practices three times a week and experienced soccer players are invited. The team hopes to join a Mobile, Ala., league this spring and has two tournaments lined up for the summer.

For more information, call Hernandez, 377-1991.

Louisiana getaway available for anglers

March 2008

By Earlene Smith

81st Services Squadron

Keesler's outdoor recreation has placed two camper trailers at Delacroix, La., available for rent by all persons eligible to use 81st Services Division facilities who want to enjoy an extraordinary fishing experience.

Delacroix is an unincorporated town located in St. Bernard Parish in the southeastern portion of the state. Settled by the Spanish in the 1780s, it became an established fishing community in the 1820s, supplying New Orleans restaurants with a seemingly endless supply of shrimp, fish and crabs.

Today the area surrounded by saltwater bays, lakes, bayous and marshes is famous for fishing and trapping and is considered to be one of the largest estuaries in the world.

Visitors are treated to some of the best freshwater and saltwater fishing in Louisiana. Prime catches include red fish, speckled trout, flounder, bass, sheepshead and drum.

Keesler's 30-foot expandable campers are within 75 yards of the only bait shop and boat launch in the area. They're completely self-contained, sleep four, have a table and four chairs, and rent for $50 a night. They're available first come, first served, or can be reserved by calling 377-3160.

One of Services' self-contained trailers available for rent.

Campers must bring their own food, beverages, sleeping bag or bedding, cooking utensils, and boat. Those who don't own a boat can rent a 14-foot skiff with outboard motor and trailer from outdoor recreation.

The user fee is $22 day, $44.75 weekend or $99 week.

When on the water, it is strongly recommended you use a Global Positioning System or map of Delacroix to avoid getting lost.

Former Services director Donald Cook displays two fish he caught on a recent fishing expedition to Delacroix. A Louisiana fishing license is required which can be purchased before departure at Wal-Mart or Academy Sports in Gulfport.

Travel to land's end

Getting to the Delacroix campsite is an experience in itself. It takes about two hours to travel the 110 miles from Keesler. When you reach your destination, you feel as though you've traveled to the end of the world.

Take Interstate 10 West into Louisiana. Leave the interstate at exit 246A toward NASA/Chalmette and merge onto Louisiana Highway 47 south, Paris Rd.

Turn left onto East Judge Perez Drive/LA-39 S and continue to LA-46 E which eventually become LA-300, better known to locals as Delacroix Highway. Keep driving. The camping area is on your left about 1/8 mile from the end of the road.
