Policy changes target stability, quality of life

Air Force Personnel Center

RANDOLPH Air Force Base, Texas — Air Force officials have modified two permanent change of station policies to give Airmen more flexible assignment options and better force development opportunities.

The time-on-station requirement for government funded join-spouse assignments, where military couples are assigned, when possible, to a location where they can live in the same residence, has changed from 24 to 12 months.

“This change gives Airmen more flexibility and will help minimize financial hardships for married couples who are geographically separated and managing two households,” said Letty Inabinet, chief of the assignment programs and procedures branch at the Air Force Personnel Center.

This policy change also applies to Airmen with projected permissive join-spouse assignments who have not departed their current duty station.

Permissive reassignments are those where Airmen pay all moving expenses and travel time is charged as leave.

The other PCS change involves recent adjustments in manning requirements for Airmen at stateside bases, which is expected to open up more base-of-preference opportunities for

Fireworks harbor many risks

By Maj. Karl Zurbrugg

81st Training Wing chief of safety

As the 4th of July approaches, the Air Force continues to value the safety of its personnel. The 4th of July provides people with the opportunity to relax and take some time off of work, but being safe during this holiday weekend is always paramount.

The 4th of July offers us a time to enjoy fireworks and being with family. Remember that fireworks are not toys and are dangerous. They should be treated with the respect that they deserve.

It is illegal to use fireworks of any kind, to include sparklers, on Keesler or in the city of Biloxi. The City of Biloxi has a beautiful free fireworks display on the beach that's available for viewing.

If you are going out of town or to an area that has legal fireworks use, remember these things. Never mix alcohol with fireworks. This will only make a dangerous situation even more risky.

Fireworks should also be kept out of the hands of children, as most children won't fully understand the ability of fireworks to cause injury.

Be very careful of "dud" fireworks. If a firework fails to ignite, let it sit for five minutes, then douse it in a bucket of water. It is advisable to always have a bucket of water nearby.

The best advice is to use your common sense. If it sounds like it could be a bad idea, it is.

Only 94 words — but each one is important

By Master Sgt. Steven Alford

85th Engineering Installation Squadron first sergeant

What does The Airman's Creed mean? Why is it important? Do I really need to know all the words?

The Airman's Creed was first introduced April 18, 2007 after a collaborative effort from Airmen across the Air Force. Although we have had many official and unofficial slogans over the last half-century; the Airman's Creed unifies the war fighting ethos that distinguishes what it means to be an Airman.

I am an American Airman. We are not just any Airmen — we are American Airmen, and that means something to our friends and foes alike. To our friends, allies and coalition partners it means having your bigger, stronger brother at your back. To our foes, it means having that big brother in your face. Personally, I would prefer not to be on the business end of a U.S. Air Force strike package rolling in on me from somewhere out of the blue. Who else can deliver persistent, precision power from the air the way we can? The Air Force motto answers that question: "No One Comes Close."

I am faithful to a proud heritage, a tradition of honor and a legacy of valor. The creed also reminds us of a heritage, tradition and legacy uniquely ours. As far back as the 1920s, when powered flight was still a pimply-faced teenager, Brig. Gen. Billy Mitchell was making a lot of very unpopular noise about the combat value of airpower. Turns out he was right, but his prophetic passions earned him a court-martial for insubordination and demotion to the rank of colonel. Nevertheless, he is regarded as the Father of the U.S. Air Force.

A guardian of freedom and justice, my nation's sword and shield, its sentry and avenger ... I will never leave an Airman behind. We are a combat-ready force. We are an expeditionary force. We are an agile, responsive force. We are warriors. With increasing regularity, Airmen are being called upon to deploy on a moment's notice and engage the enemy in combat operations — on the ground. And just as regularly, Air Force Reservists and Air National Guardsmen are right there beside their active-duty counterparts.

Every one of you is a leader, every one of you is a warrior and every one of you is a wingman. We need to fully embrace it so our airmen know we are serious about it and embrace it just as much as they do. We need to accept the Airman's Creed. Many have argued in the past that they had their favorite creed, one base's Airman's Creed or a Chief's Creed for example, but then when you ask them to recite it, and they couldn't. The Air Force has made it easy for us by making the Airman's Creed our one and only creed. Regardless of where we go, we will know our Airman's Creed.

Why then do we need a creed? Our Air Force has been so completely challenged and transformed by global contingencies that we can no longer afford the luxury of pre-9/11 thinking. We need to adapt to this new world order, to see things as they really are and to see ourselves in our new roles as 21st century Airmen. This is not only a present reality; it is our future as well. These days, non-aviation Airmen are seeing more action than fighter pilots. You can expect more deployments, to more unusual locations, doing work never before attempted by the U.S. Air Force.

Remember, The Airman's Creed is only 94 words long, but in those 94 words lie your identity for as long as you wear the Air Force uniform.

E-book technology offers savings, faster updates for weather training

By Susan Griggs

Keesler News editor

They're all the rage on talk shows and top sellers on online book stores — and now the latest electronic book technology is an integral part of training in the 335th Training Squadron's weather training flight.

"An e-book is basically an electronic book that allows you to flip through the pages, highlight the text, take notes and even fold the corners of pages so you can go back to reference them," said Capt. Brian Miller, weather officer course instructor. "We're the only ones using them right now at Keesler, but they already use them at Maxwell (Air Force Base, Ala.) and Hurlburt Field (Fla.)"

"We're excited to be bringing this technology from the marketplace into the training environment," said Maj. Matt Stratton, weather training flight commander, who said the e-books the flight uses are similar to the popular "Kindle" developed by Amazon.com.

Right now, e-books are being used in Captain Miller's course and the open principal user processor radar manager course. By the time the weather flight's operations course starts using e-books next month, the number of students using the devices will top 100.

"The next step will be integrating e-books into the 7-month weather forecaster apprentice course, if additional e-books can be procured," Captain Miller commented.

The flight originally proposed e-books to the 81st Training Group to reduce printing costs such as paper, ink and wear and tear on printers.

As currently implemented, students are issued e-books that are pre-loaded with student texts and slide show presentations. In the future, all reference material will be provided on the e-books as well, including Air Force Manuals and Instructions.

However, the cost of printing is not the only advantage to e-book technology, according to Captain Miller. Another benefit is the quick turnaround on course updates and material corrections.

"In the past, corrections would be pen-and-ink changes until all material was used or would be an additional cost to the flight to send material back to printers," the captain explained. "Course updates waited for all material to be used before being incorporated into the student text. Now this information can be added overnight, versus the one- or two-week turnaround required for printing."

Additionally, the benefit of new technology into the courses brought something today's Airmen are used to seeing and using to the Air Force classroom.

"The flight received mixed reviews during the first couple of classes, as it took both instructors and students awhile to get use to using the new technology," Captain Miller pointed out. "Now the feedbacks are mostly positive, with a special note to the ease of carrying and maintaining one e-book versus the amount of paper materials that used to be carried to class every day.

"Another benefit that the students enjoy is having access to the PowerPoint slideshows," he added. "This enables the students to be active in class instead of trying to write everything down that is shown on the board."

New faces in training arena

Dale Riggins, 81st Training Support Squadron, briefs his new commander, Lt. Col. Janet Haug, on the FMQ-19 equipment located between Jones and Hewes Hall that's used in the airfield systems course. Colonel Haug, who took command from Lt. Col. Kevin O'Rourke June 17, came to Keesler from Air Force headquarters, where she was chief space operator in the Secretary of the Air Force and Chief of Staff executive action group. Colonel O'Rourke is now analysis and operations program manager at the Pentagon.

Lt. Col. Michael Callender became the commander of the 334th Training Squadron June 10. He came to Keesler from Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., where he was the operations officer for the 46th Operations Support Squadron. He assumed command from Lt. Col. S. Douglas Chowning, who is attending Naval War College in Brussels, Belgium.

3 picked for nurse commissioning program

81st Medical Group Public Affairs and Keesler News staff

Three Keesler members were recently selected for the Nurse Enlisted Commissioning Program.

Senior Airman Shandrika Smith, 81st Medical Operations Squadron, and Staff Sgts. Brian King, 81st Surgical Operations Squadron, and Joshua Baker, 338th Training Squadron, begin the two-year program in August.

They'll be commissioned second lieutenants in the Air Force upon graduation and successful completion of their nursing licensing boards. Following commissioning, they'll attend Commissioned Officer Training at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala., and nurse transition training at a military treatment facility offering this program.

Airman Smith, who provides administrative support in Keesler Medical Center's oncology-hematology clinic, will attend the University of South Alabama School of Nursing. She recently earned her associate degree from Mississippi Gulf Coast Community College.

Airman Smith has been a member of the Air Force for three years.

Sergeant King, a surgical services technician in the 81st orthopedic clinic, met all NECP requirements and completed most of his prerequisite schooling at MGCCC. He'll attend the University of Southern Mississippi School of Nursing.

He's served in the Air Force nearly 10 years and has been at Keesler since February 2005.

Sergeant Baker, a ground radio instructor, earned three associate degrees — electronics systems technology and instructor of military sciences through the Community College of the Air Force and biology from MGCCC. He'll attend William Carey University.

He joined the Air Force in September 2003 and came to Keesler in February 2007.

Steve Pivnick, 81st Medical Group Public Affairs, and Susan Griggs, Keesler News editor, contributed to this report.

Medics earns top CDC scores

Airman 1st Class Kristin Conde, 81st Medical Support Squadron, earned a 96 on her career development course test. She came to the U.S. in 2006, joined the Air Force in 2007 and arrived at Keesler 11 months ago. She earned a bachelor's degree from the University of Santa Thomas in the Philippines and became a U.S. citizen June 16. Another medic, Airman 1st Class Ricky Morgan, 81st Medical Operations Squadron, made a 95 on his CDC test.

Efforts by small class have significant results

By Susan Griggs

Keesler News editor

A class of seven weather students in the 335th Training Squadron raised $3,160 through hot dog and hamburger sales to support scholarships for Kamp Kaleidoscope, the only camp of its kind in Mississippi for autistic children.

Staff Sgt. Cynthia Reeves, their instructor, said the two-week camp for children ages 7 to young adults accommodates about 130 campers a year who enjoy swimming, horseback riding, fishing, sensory and educational activities, arts and crafts, hiking and other summer fun.

TEAAM — Together Enhancing Autism Awareness in Mississippi — hosts the camp funded by the Mississippi Council on Developmental Disabilities along with private charitable contributions.

“The price for each camper used to be $35, but it’s risen to $200 plus a $50 registration fee,” said Sergeant Reeves, who learned about the program through the Ocean Springs School District. “The contribution our class made enabled every child on the scholarship list to attend the camp. I’m very proud of what our class was able to accomplish.”

81st Dental Squadron showcases completely remodeled clinic

By Steve Pivnick

81st Medical Group Public Affairs

The Keesler Dental Clinic was rededicated June 17 during a formal ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Maj. Gen. (Dr.) Gar Graham, command surgeon for the Headquarters Air Force District of Washington at Bolling Air Force Base, D.C., and commander of the 79th Medical Wing, Andrews AFB, Md., joined Col. Ian Dickinson, 81st Training Wing commander, and Brig. Gen. (Dr.) Dan Wyman, 81st Medical Group commander, for the event.

Col. (Dr.) John Embry, 81st Dental Squadron commander, noted the dental clinic opened in 1963 with the facility's original east wing.

"The present building has undergone several renovations and additions over the last 46 years to bring it to its present form," he observed.

The first dental residents were trained in 1978-79. From 1983 to 2000, the program was a two-year program for general dentists and in 2001 became a one-year training program.

"Keesler started training endodontists in 2003 and graduated the first class in 2005, just before Katrina hit," Colonel Embry said. "This program was restarted in 2007 and will graduate two residents this summer.

The entering class for 2009 will be comprised of eight Advanced Education in General Dentistry-1 residents, two general practice residents and four endodontic residents (two in their clinical second year and two in their didactic year at Louisiana State University.)

The clinic currently has a staff of 136 — 23 staff dentists, 12 resident dentists, three contract dentists and 124 auxiliary staff.

The most recent renovation involved every aspect of the clinic. The floors were refinished with ceramic tile, the walls repainted and the cabinets upgraded to a handle-free system. The functional aesthetics also simplify infection control procedures.

Each dental treatment room has been outfitted with new dental chairs. Electric hand pieces are included. This "drill" is much quieter than the air-driven model and much more acceptable to patients who dread the noise of the hand piece.

An intraoral camera with a viewing screen visible to the patient was incorporated into the design of the chair. Patients are able to clearly see the condition of their teeth and gums, which allows the dentist to more easily discuss dental problems and explain treatment options.

In addition, the clinic's radiology has been upgraded with state-of-the-art digital X-ray technology, greatly reducing the minimal amount of radiation exposure dental X-rays deliver.

These changes are expected to open up opportunities in the Voluntary Stabilized Base Assignment Program, which gives Airmen the option to volunteer for certain bases in the continental U.S. that historically have been hard to fill. The benefit to the volunteer is a stabilized tour of either four or five years depending on the location.

Callers can remain anonymous.

Personnel are highly encouraged to use their chain of command and/or local EO office as a first means to address concerns, but the 24/7 hotline is available to those who don't have immediate access to their local EO office.

Medical appointments

People needing appointments at Keesler Medical Center can book them online instead of calling the central appointment desk.

Log on to <http://www.tricareonline.com> and click on "My Health" to complete registration. Common access card holders may use their cards and personal identification numbers, while others must set up a username and password.

The site allows users to book urgent and non-urgent appointments based on their needs.

Appointments are automatically booked with the individual's primary care manager. If the PCM is unavailable, the user is given the option to make the appointment with another provider in the same clinic.

All active-duty members should register themselves at the online site when they arrive at Keesler.

Family members must be registered separately.

For more information, call 376-3101.

PCS requirement

All members making a permanent change of station move or to any continental United States location or unaccompanied overseas tour now are required to complete an Air Force Form 4380, Air Force Special Needs Screener.

This requirement helps determine if the new location can meet the required special needs. PCS orders won't be processed prior to completion of the form, or receipt of final determination on exceptional family member program enrollment for any responses that indicate the presence of special needs. Members with PCS to accompanied overseas tours continue to process the Air Force Forms 1466 and 1466D.

Demolition of the homes in South Pinehaven should be finished by mid-September. Motorists are asked to exercise extreme caution with the increased volume of heavy equipment traffic in the area.

Last pre-Katrina homes being leveled

By Susan Griggs

Keesler News editor

Demolition of the 106 homes in the South Pinehaven family housing area, the last family dwellings that existed at Keesler before Hurricane Katrina nearly four years ago, continues until mid-September.

Dave Horner of the base's program management office said construction of Keesler's homes, the largest military family housing project in Air Force history, has picked up steam in the second section of Bay Ridge, where 149 homes are being built.

Nearly 60 percent of the 170 homes in Southwest Falcon Park have been completed. Demolition has been completed in East Falcon Park, where 194 homes are planned.

Homes already completed in the $287.8 million project include 198 in Thrower Park, 136 in Northwest Falcon Park and 181 in Bay Ridge-A.

'Cyclevision' helps motorists share roadways

Texas Department of Public Safety

AETC Safety Directorate

With more motorcycles on the road than ever before, operators of other motor vehicles can take an active role by putting on their "cyclevision" — a mental awareness and attitude that motorcycles are everywhere.

Cyclevision involves understanding the challenges faced by motorcyclists so motorists can see another point of view while driving. Then they're able to anticipate the riders' moves and perhaps help prevent a crash from occurring. Motorists that put on their cyclevision look for, understand and respect motorcycles sharing the roadway and recognize potential crash areas.

A major cause of motorcycle crashes is the failure of motorists to detect and recognize motorcycles in traffic. To avoid crashes and reduce injuries and fatalities, motorists should develop an awareness of motorcycles, an understanding of what to expect from them and knowledge of where most crashes are likely to occur.

The National Highway Traffic

Safety Administration reports more than half of all crashes involving a motorcycle and a passenger car occurred because the motorist didn't see the motorcycle, or didn't see it in time to respond.

Motorists tend to look for other cars, not motorcycles. Motorcycles are smaller than cars and trucks, so they're harder to see. It's also difficult to judge a motorcycle's speed and distance accurately.

A motorcycle occupies four feet of a 12-foot lane in traffic, but moves within the lane when adjusting to changing conditions with the road, the weather or other vehicles. Motorcyclists typically ride in the left portion of a lane, but may move suddenly to get out of a motorist's blind spot, so give them a full lane and remember not to follow too closely.

Three common problem areas are intersections, two lanes of traffic traveling in the same direction and external conditions.

The most frequent cause of multi-vehicle crashes is a motorist turning left in front of an oncoming motorcycle. Any time the paths of two vehicles cross, a danger point is created, including driveways, parking lots and side street entrances. Drivers should look twice at intersections before proceeding.

When vehicles slow, stop or turn, the possibility for a collision is greatly increased.

Motorcycles may be difficult to see and susceptible to crashes when they're changing lanes, passing cars or being passed. Crashes often occur when motorists follow motorcycles too closely or try to share their lane.

Motorcycles don't have protective exteriors like cars, so motorcyclists are more vulnerable to external elements such as inclement weather and road conditions.

Motorists should actively look for motorcycles, not just other cars, when they're on the road. Don't trust your mirrors because motorcycles can be hidden in your blind spot — turn and look over your shoulder.

Reach Out and Read

Pediatric clinic seeks 'gently used' books to revive role in national reading program

By Steve Pivnick

Keesler News staff

Providers in the 81st Medical Operations Squadron pediatric clinic have re-energized the "Reach Out and Read" program at Keesler Medical Center.

"Reach Out and Read" is a national nonprofit organization that promotes early literacy by giving new books to children and advice to parents about the importance of reading aloud in pediatric exam rooms across the nation.

The program was in place at Keesler prior to Hurricane Katrina in August 2005 which destroyed the clinic's supply of children's books.

The clinic staff is asking for donations of "gently used" books for their ROR program.

"We are specifically looking to fill our waiting areas with books for the children to read as they wait for their appointments," explained Maj. Vonda Goodison, the clinic's nurse manager.

"In the exam room, doctors and nurses, trained in the developmental strategies of early literacy, encourage parents to read aloud to their young children and offer age-appropriate tips," the major said. "The pediatric primary care provider gives every child between the ages of 6 months and 5 years a new, developmentally-appropriate children's book to take home and keep.

"In the waiting room, displays, information and gently-used books create a literacy-rich environment," she continued. "Where possible, volunteer readers entertain the children, modeling for the parents the pleasures — and techniques — of reading aloud."

Keesler is among 32 military bases currently offering ROR programs. According to the ROR website, more than 90,000 children of military families participate in ROR annually and more than 180,000 new, developmentally-appropriate books are distributed to children on military bases each year.

Maj. (Dr.) Eric Flake, 81st MDOS, originated Keesler's program when he was a pediatric resident here and said Keesler was the first of the 32 military sites.

"Many of the new sites are a direct result of the example set by Keesler Pediatrics and its training of residents who requested that ROR be implemented at their new base," he pointed out. "The 'gently used' book library created by generous donations from the Keesler Spouses Club, Boy Scouts and youth groups was destroyed during Katrina and hasn't been reestablished."

He added, "ROR at Keesler did not stop despite Katrina but continued to provide books for children under the leadership of Capt. (Dr.) Melissa Mauro, who's currently the director of ROR at Keesler."

Licensing required for child care on base

By Earlene Smith

81st Force Support Squadron

People living in base housing who care for children in their homes could be breaking the rules.

Air Force Instruction 34-276, which governs day care in on-base quarters, states “any individuals caring for children more than 10 hours a week on a regular basis must get approval.”

It states that the “installation commander may revoke the housing privileges of individuals who provide child care but refuse to become licensed or who continue to provide care after their license has been suspended or revoked.”

The rule applies whether or not caregivers are compensated for their services.

“We feel people living in base housing, who regularly care for children without being licensed, may be unaware of the regulation,” said Mary Pleasant, family child care program coordinator. “We want not only to bring the information to their attention, but to educate them on the alternative — to become a licensed family childcare provider.”

Licenses are granted by the 81st Mission Support Group commander, usually within 30 days upon completion of the initial FCC provider training, background screenings and home inspections.

The training includes child guidance, play environments, nutrition, ages and stages of development, child abuse and neglect, recordkeeping, business management, cardiopulmonary resuscitation and first aid.

“FCC providers are professionals trained to give the best possible care to the children left in their charge,” said Ms. Pleasant.

Once licensed, providers may care for children from 2 weeks through 12 years old assistance from the FCC staff in setting up their home and have access to an extensive library for toys, equipment and materials which help keep costs down. They may set up their own hours of operation and fee structure.

Keesler's annual water quality report released

81st Aerospace Medicine Squadron

Is my water safe?

Last year, as in years past, your tap water met all U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and state drinking water health standards.

Do I need to take special precautions?

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/Centers for Disease Control guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbial contaminants are available from the Safe Water Drinking Hotline, 1-800-426-4791.

Where does my water come from?

The drinking water being delivered to Keesler is pumped from the Lower Graham Ferry Aquifer, a ground-water source. All water provided to Keesler is pumped from wells located on base property. The water from the wells is mixed, treated, stored and distributed.

Source water assessment and availability

The purpose of a source water assessment is to determine the quality of the raw water used for drinking water. At Keesler, the only treatment performed on source water is the addition of chlorine and fluoride. Because of the limited chemical treatment, the analytical results for Keesler's drinking water are representative of its source water.

Why are there contaminants in my drinking water?

Drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants doesn't necessarily indicate that water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the Environmental Protection Agency's Safe Drinking Water Hotline, 1-800-426-4791.

The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally occurring minerals and, in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity: microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria, that may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations and wildlife; inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals, which can be naturally occurring or result from urban stormwater runoff, industrial, or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining, or farming; pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture, urban stormwater runoff, and residential uses; organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban stormwater runoff, and septic systems; and radioactive contaminants, which can be naturally occurring or be the result of oil and gas production and mining activities.

In order to ensure that tap water is safe to drink, EPA prescribes regulations that limit the amount of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems. Food and Drug Administration regulations establish limits for contaminants in bottled water which must provide the same protection for public health.

How can I get involved?

Education is the key to getting involved and understanding your drinking water. For more information, log on to the Centers for Disease Control website, <http://www.cdc.gov/safewater/>

Lead and copper violations

Infants and children who drink water containing lead in excess of the action level could experience delays in their physical or mental development. Children could show slight deficits in attention span and learning abilities. Adults who drink this water over many years could develop kidney problems or high blood pressure.

Additional information for lead

If present, elevated levels of lead can cause serious health problems, especially for pregnant women and young children. Lead in drinking water is primarily from materials and components associated with service lines and home plumbing. Keesler (PWS ID#240049) is responsible for providing high quality drinking water, but can't control the variety of materials used in plumbing components. When your water has been sitting for several hours, you can minimize the potential for lead exposure by flushing your tap for 30 seconds to two minutes before using water for drinking or cooking. If you're concerned about lead in your water, you may wish to have your water tested. For more information, log on to the Safe Drinking Water Hotline or <http://www.epa.gov/safewater/lead>.

Water quality data table

The table at right lists all drinking water contaminants detected during the calendar year of this report. The presence of contaminants in the water doesn't necessarily indicate that the water poses a health risk. Unless otherwise noted, the data presented in this table is from testing done in the calendar year of the report. The EPA or the state requires us to monitor for certain contaminants less than once per year because the concentrations of these contaminants don't change frequently.

Table terms and definitions ppm — parts per million or milligrams per liter

ppb — parts per billion or micrograms per liter

NA — not applicable

ND — not detected

NR — monitoring not required, but recommended

MCLG — maximum contaminant level goal; the level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there's no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.

MCL — maximum contaminant level; the highest level of a contaminant allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.

TT — treatment technique; required process intended to reduce level of contaminant.

AL — action level; concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.

Variances and exceptions — state or EPA permission not to meet an MCL or a treatment technique under certain conditions.

MRDLG — maximum residual disinfection level goal; level of a drinking water disinfectant below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MRDLGs don't reflect the benefits of the use of disinfectants to control microbial contaminants.

MNR — monitored, not regulated

MPL — state assigned maximum permissible level.

Intramural softball finals tonight

By Airman 1st Class David Salantri

Keesler Public Affairs

By the end of play Monday night, the 2009 intramural softball playoffs went from 19 teams to six teams in the postseason single-elimination tournament.

The top four seeds in the National League have advanced to the quarter finals and two teams have advanced in the American League to the semi-finals.

The final game is 6 p.m. today on Field 4.

Showing down in the American League are the second seeded 334th Training Squadron and the surprising fifth-seeded 338th TRS-B team that's already managed two upsets in the tournament.

The winner of Wednesday's game advances to the championship against the National League winner s.

In the National League, four teams were left with the semi-finals played Tuesday evening. The combined 81st Force Support Squadron/Comptroller Squadron team hasn't lost a game since May 15, making them the hottest team in the league going into its game against the 81st Communication Squadron/85th Engineering Installation Squadron. The winner of that game faces the victor of the game between the No. 1 seed 336th TRS vs. 81st Civil Engineer Squadron/ fire department team.

ENERGY AWARENESS

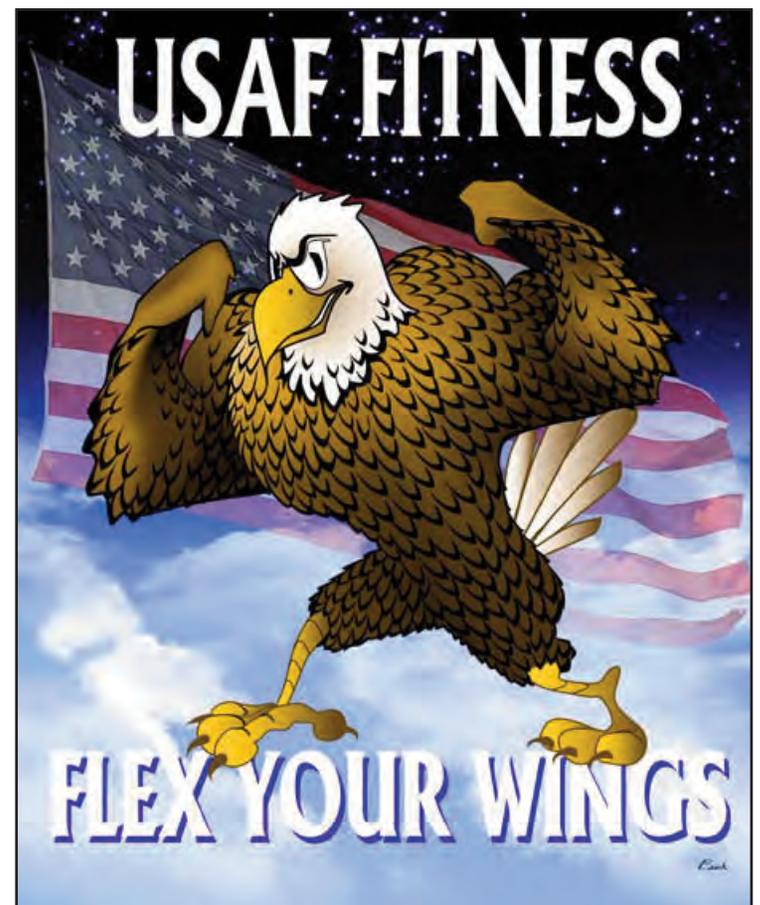

Energy conservation helps create and maintain a clean environment, reduces pollution and our dependence on foreign oil, and helps the Air Force meet its federal goals. Here's how you can help:

- Turn off lights in unoccupied offices or rooms
- Replace inefficient incandescent bulbs with energy-efficient compact fluorescent bulbs
- Turn off monitors, printers and fax machines when leaving at the end of the day
- Buy "Energy Star" labeled appliances and products
- Install programmable thermostats to set lower temperatures in unoccupied areas
- Make sure broken windows are reported and everything is caulked and sealed as appropriate
- Recycle. Recycling paper can save one tree per 16.5 reams of paper; recycling one aluminum can saves enough energy to run a television for three hours
- Styrofoam is not recyclable -- use coffee mugs instead
